Shelbina and the Surrounding Area 2003

Shelbina, Missouri, was established on the rolling prairie of Northeast Missouri in 1857 as a railhead for the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad. Rich farm land and good transportation combined to make the new town attractive to settlers who quickly called it home.

Schools, churches, businesses, and civic ventures quickly took shape and helped form the community that continues to thrive today. For more than one hundred and forty years, citizens of Shelbina have worked together to improve city services, offer better educational opportunities, and support strong businesses.

As a farming community, Shelbina continues to uphold the traditions of the family farm while pursuing the innovations of progress. The first commercial corn planter invented and manufactured in Shelbina years ago. And the formation of an Economic Development Council in 1997 has assured that such forward thinking continues.

A newspaper article in the 1880's referred to the new town as "The Queen City of the Prairie." Today, citizens of the community would agree that Shelbina reigns as a perfect combination of small-town hospitality and big city progress.

The following businesses and community organizations encourage you to visit Shelbina and enjoy this hospitality yourself.
